The children with their teachers assembled the Charges were fully proved. The defendor clock, in the morning, favored by the finor clock, in the morning, favored by the finant offering no evidence, the judge asked Mr.
May if he wished to say anything in behalf of est weather, and went in a procession, led by the standard bearer of the noble American flag, to the front of the court-house, and from to the front of the court-house, and from themes to the turnpike down to and along Front street as far as. Garrison street, when they walked onwards until they reached the determined place. After the children arrived they rested a little and enjoyed themselves by looking at the well-ordered and richly provided tables, the more intimate acquaintance of which they were soon about to form. They then commenced playing in different groups, roved about the fine grove, searched for solitary wooddeners, twisted wreaths and garlands, listened to the merry songs of the haplands, listened to the merry songs of the hap-py injubitants of the troes and bushes, which they seemed to imitate or rather recemble. Some of the boys enjoyed their proud prerog-ative of shooting, being delighted by the vi-brating answer of the semate cabe, but they were so mannerly as to do it at some distance from the company. As soon, however, as the call for dinner resounded, both girls and boys hurried to their tables and received their due hurried to their tables and received their due share of the abundant variety of cakes, tarts, pies, cherries and currants, etc. The marching and playing had done its duty; for it was no small pleasure to see what hearty compliments they paid to the productions of nature and kitchen. At the clear of the dinner, Mr. Halbe addressed the children in the Garages. Halbe addressed the children in the German your name, your deeds, will be as the stars on traine addressed the children in the German language, explaining to them the history and importance of the day. Mr. Lang, rose after shine as brightly on the earth as the stars of bearers. importance of the day. Mr. Lang, rose after him, and spoke in English, as there was a large number, who did not understand German.—
He promised the children another featival, on the next fourth of July, provided they would attend dilligently to their respective Sabbath achoots. Thus the company was entertained by the sweet soops of the choir of the Lutheran Chirch; and it seemed to the writer of this, that no heart remained untouched by the simple sublimity of those beautiful hymns, swelling through heaven's magnificent space, accompanied by the inarmuring leaves of the surrounding grave. After singing it was continued, as the greatest part of the day was gone, to return to town. So the procession gone, to return to town. So the procession again and walked through Crognan street to the Lutheran church, where the cale-bration was closed by a German and English I do not think it necessary to write a com-antary on the propriety and utility of cele-ations of this kind, Every person knows how apt they are to impress the tender hearts of our youths, with reverging and thank; feelings towards the fathers of this Republic, to kindle in their souls the holy flame of pa-triotism and pure ambition. But, as this is known, I must ask the question, why do men of influence reject such suitable opportunities, and care daily about their own pleasures, leaving the boys in the streets to their natural propensities of doing mischief. Mr. Ling said, very truly, in his address to the characteristics of doing mischief. Mr. Ling said, very truly, in his address to the characteristics of doing mischief. Mr. Ling said, very truly, in his address to the characteristics of doing mischief. pensities of doing mischief. At this said, very truly, in his address to the children, that when there was or would arise any danger of the downfall of this mighty republic, it would consist principally in the want of education and increase of rowdyisto.

As a German, I am, however, proud of hear ing that my countrymes all over these glorious United States, celebrated the Fourth of July in the most laudible manner. All the German newspapers, which I had an opportunity to look in, state that every stere they greeted the woole human family. So it was also by your German Republican.
